- 5 i. Hans Jacob⁵ Richter, born 1674 in Trupbach, Germany; died 1728 in Germantown, Virginia. He married Elizabeth Fishback January 17, 1710/11 in Trupbach, Germany; born Abt. 1687 in Trupbach, Germany; died Aft. 1760 in Rectortown, Virginia.

Notes for Hans Jacob Richter:

His surname 'Richter' (meaning "Judge") was Anglicized to 'Rector' after one or two generations of his descendants had been living in America. The 'Hans' in his German name is an abbreviation of 'Johannes' and is equivalent to 'Jack.'

In 1986, they are the ancestors of thousands of descendants including: 1) Henry Massey Rector, 6th governor of Arkansas, 2) James Sevier Conway, first governor of Arkansas, 3) Elias Nelson Conway, fifth governor of Arkansas, 4) James Lawson Kemper, governor of Virginia, 1874/1878, 5) William Meade Fishback, governor of Arkansas 1893/1895.

During the governorship of Alexander Spotswood from 1710 to 1722, iron ore deposits were discovered in what is now Northeast Orange County, Virginia. Prior to this time, there had been no iron ore mining and production of iron products in the Colonies. All much needed items made of this metal were imported from England at great expense. The Governor fully realized that if this newly found and valuable resource could be mined, processed into farm implements, tools, household items, guns, etc. it would be of great benefit to the Colony.

Swiss promoter/developer Baron Von Graffenreid was engaged by Governor Spotswood to recruit immigrants from the old Principality of Nassau-Siegen area, now a part of Westphalia, Germany to mine and process this newly found iron ore. This area of Germany, about 45 miles east of Bonn, was selected because iron ore had been mined, processed and iron products manufactured there for centuries.

Twelve families, consisting of 42 individuals, with a knowledge of iron ore mining, processing and iron products manufacturing from the Nassau-Siegen area were persuaded to immigrate to the New World. Subject John Jacob Rector, his wife Elizabeth Fishback and their son John were one of these families.

In the summer of 1713, the 12 families departed their German homeland for the New World. Their first stop was Maidstone, England. On arrival they found their promoter was without money or provisions for the voyage to America. During the winter of 1713/1714, they worked to pay their own way and April 1714 landed not far from Williamsburg, Virginia; the then seat of government.

The settlers named their new home Germanna in remembrance of their homeland and to honor Queen Anna of England. They cleared the forest and built their homes and a church. And for the first time in the New World they engaged in iron ore mining and processing and production of iron products. The Government cut a road through the forest into the area, built a fort and furnished two cannons and ammunition for protection against the Indians.

About 1720, the twelve Germanna families moved northward about 19 miles into what is now Fauquier County, Virginia and settled on a tract of 1,805 acres. They named their new community 'Germantown.'

John Jacob Rector, and his 4 children and some of his grandchildren spent the remainder of their lives at or near Germantown. His youngest son Jacob and other descendants migrated westward and have since lived in, or are now living in most all areas of the United States.

Since schooling was compulsory in Germany at the time of his birth there, it is assumed John Jacob Rector was an educated person. He was admitted to the Guild of Steelsmiths and Toolmakers of the Fredenberg District as a toolmaker on January 7, 1712. And was an elder in the German Reformed Church; the great German branch of the Presbyterian family of churches.

Notes for LON M. REEVES:

Lon Mac, the middle son of Van W. and Etta Reeves, lived in the house where his parents and grandparents raised their families. It has grown over the years, the original log house now comprising the kitchen and dining rooms. Nine rooms, including five bedrooms have been added to accomodate growing generations of the Reeves family. A porch around the front and side has replaced an earlier second floor balcony above the front door. The house has been the scene of many Reeves family reunions.

Lon Mac and Madge Rector Reeves began their married life in Sparta in 1920. Later, they moved to a farm just of town before in 1928, purchasing the Reeves farm from his father. A rural mail carrier for over 35 years, a farmer and active member of his community and church, Lon Mac served as Clerk of the Mountain Association for number of years. Both he and his wife were tireless workers and devoted members of Little River Primitive Baptist Church. Following the death of Madge Reeves in 1980, Lela Reeves Crouse moved into the house with her brother where, she too, grew up.[Rector.FTW]
